Commenting on the findings, Simon McKeever, Chief Executive of the Irish Exporters Association said: “The IEA Consular Department and Visa Service has been growing very strongly year on year. The first half of 2018 has been a remarkably busy year for the IEA with more and more Irish exporters exploring new markets, new trade routes and new customers. The unparalleled service that the IEA Consular Department provide cannot be underestimated. With the uncertain future of Brexit still a looming issue for the Irish export industry, diversification of export markets is one of the key ways of managing Brexit risk and over reliance on the UK market. We will continue to develop new and innovative solutions for our members on issues regarding their international trade and we will continue to be the voice of the Irish export industry in the media and lobby government on issues at the heart of international trade.”
